General Guidelines:

- This is a form that our placement coordinators overseas will use to help secure an interview at a suitable placement in your area of interest.
- Check all boxes that apply above.
- Fill out all of the information below. Answers should be detailed, professional, and typed. Don't name a particular organization as placement with that organization may not be possible and will limit the dissemination of your application to other organizations.
- Attach a copy of your current resume to the original form.
- Please note applicants must have completed three semesters of Chinese language study in order to be eligible for internship placement.

Nature of Desired Internship

Please answer these questions on a separate typed page making sure that you state the question before answering.

1. Provide general information on the kind of internship you would like to have.

In this section, indicate the primary focus or emphasis of the work you would like to do, related to your major or area of interest. Please indicate whether your preference is to work in a locally-owned company or organization, joint-venture, or foreign enterprise. Placements are limited and interviews for potential placements will be scheduled once you have arrived in China. Keep in mind that there are some limitations on what students are allowed to do in certain fields. The more general your expectations are, the more freedom our coordinators will have to search for suitable placements.

2. Summarize qualifying background and/or previous experience relevant to your desired internship.

In this section, please include any previous experience that would be relevant to your internship (e.g. internships or jobs you have held; previous cultural or academic experiences). Be sure to include the nature of your positions and responsibilities. Specify any special skills you have.

3. What academic or career directed benefit do you hope to derive from your internship?

In this section, explain why this internship, research, or film is relevant to your career and/or academic goals. Describe how this experience will enhance your future plans.
